Claims 1-3 involve an inventive step

Document 1 discloses synthetic quartz glass which can be employed for illumination with ultraviolet light of a wavelength of 150-200 nm, wherein the OH group concentration in the synthetic quartz glass is 10 ppm or less, the hydrogen atom concentration is less than 1×10^{17} atoms/cm³ and it substantially does not include reduction type defects, and the change in the coefficient of absorption in the wavelength range 150-200 nm after shining ultraviolet light of wavelength 172 nm at 10 W/cm² for 10 kJ/cm² is 0.2 cm⁻¹ or less. An example also presents glass in which the OH group concentration is <0.2 ppm. However, document 1 does not disclose the feature whereby, in glass having an OH group concentration of 1 ppm or less, it is possible to lower the decrease in transmittance due to the presence an absorption band centring on 180 nm due to NBOHC, by making the concentration of oxygen excess type defects extremely low at 1×10^{16} /cm³ or less. This feature is likewise not disclosed in documents 2-8, and is not such as could be deduced easily by a person skilled in the art from this prior art.
